It is not the habit of American citizens to march on the national capitol and demand the passage of legislation in which they have a direct financial interest. Particularly is it not the custom for groups of men in widely separated sections of the country to engage spontaneously in such an unusual course of procedure. When it was announced, therefore, that bodies of World war veterans from places as widely separated as Portland, Ore., and San Francisco, Calif., had started for Washington to demand the immediate payment of the soldier bonus, the conclusion was immediately reached that the marches were inspired by some central organization, and did not arise from the spontaneous sentiment of the marchers. Proceeding upon the assumption that the movement had its inspiration in some central source, federal agencies have been quietly investigating the situation and have made disclosures which seem to demonstrate that the leaders of the communist party are responsible for the fact that groups of veterans in scores of different localities decided all at once to come to Washington. Emanuel Levin, the communist leader, admits that he is "chairman of the national bonus march committee of the workers ex-service men's league," a radical organization, and says that the league originated the movement after the Patman bill calling for cash payment of adjusted service certificates had been shelved by the House Ways and Means committee. Evidence had been introduced to show that all communists in this country have been called upon to get veterans to wire their representatives and Senators demanding a favorable report on this bill. Communists instructions sent out from headquarters in New York City and now in the hands of Federal agents, among other things call upon their members to "hold a demonstration and parade to city halls and state capitols demanding that city and state officials memorialize Congress for immediate cash payment of the bonus." Ranking communist officials had been quoted as saying that if "the bonus marches are successful it will be a great big feather in our cap."

The veterans who have allowed themselves to be made the dupes of men who avow it to be their political purpose to change our form of Government to one which shall be modeled on Soviet Russia and if necessary to use force to bring about such change will certainly find that they have not enhanced their standing with the people of the United States. It is an infinite pity that men who once offered their lives for their country should now lend themselves to a movement which, if it were successful, would most certainly result in enormous damage to the Nation, and which even if unsuccessful will yet have added another element of uncertainty to the economic situation and thus further retarded the return of prosperity.

The many friends of Mrs. E. R. Kennedy will be glad to hear that she is convalescing from a minor operation which she underwent a few days ago at the San Jose hospital and will be able to return to her home soon.

JUNE 16 SET ASIDE
FOR CALIF. FARM PRODUCTS DAY

The state department of agriculture, Dudley Moulton, director, has set aside Thursday, June 16, as Farm products day. The purpose is to expand and strengthen the home markets for California farm products.

Consumers are urged to specify home products on that day and merchants are requested to feature Farm day bargains and call attention to California grown products.

Most of the communities are arranging for special luncheons on that day but it was felt by the committee appointed by the local Chamber of Commerce and Grange that inasmuch as the San Jose Chamber of Commerce were making elaborate preparations it would be best to cooperate with them and to urge all those who can possibly do so to arrange to attend the luncheon which is to be held at the Hotel St. Claire at 12:15 o'clock. The price of the luncheon is $1 and reservations should be made by phoning the San Jose Chamber of Commerce, Columbia 3090. If impossible to attend, then tune in on KFRC at the luncheon hour for the special program arranged by farm leaders.

The department is asking that California farm products be served exclusively in every home in California on this day. Give the farmer a profit on his products, says the department, and the depression will be over automatically.

Mesdames J. Ainsley,
W. Lloyd, and G.
Ainsley Give Party

One of the charming parties of the season was the garden luncheon and afternoon of bridge given Wednesday by Mrs. John C. Ainsley, Mrs. William Lloyd and Mrs. Gordon Ainsley.

Luncheon was served at small tables in the shade of trees gracing the spacious front lawn of the Ainsley home.

Small bright flower jars holding potted flowers and plants graced the tables, which were set with colorful glass and linens.

Later the guests moved indoors where auction and contract bridge were enjoyed. Marvelous bouquets of various flowers brought the lovely gardens of the hostesses indoors for the further pleasure of their guests, some 36 in number.

CAMPBELL FIRE
DEPT VISITED BY MARSHALL HICKS

Mr. Hicks, assistant Fire Marshall of the division of Fire Safety of the state of California was in Campbell Monday inspecting the fire equipment and standardizing the threads on the hydrants and hose of the department. All fire equipment is being cleaned and repaired.

Ed Genasci, chief of the local department, announces that the department is willing to stand by on Monday nights while the grass is being burned from the lots around Campbell. It is very important that all dry grass is raked away from buildings before grass is set fire. Also that the morning and evening is the best time to burn the grass. Before any burning takes place, wet sacks, garden hose and buckets of water should be handy. After burning the lot should be wet down. The month of June is the time for cleaning off all vacant lots, says Mr. Genasci.

Dr. C. H. Bruer

From Gilroy Soon

The local medical fraternity has a new addition. Dr. Chas. H. Bruer, who with Mrs. Bruer, is moving to Campbell from Gilroy. Dr. Bruer has taken offices upstairs in the Curry building, and expects to be on the job around the first of July. They will live in the Billy Barlett house on Campbell avenue, near the tennis courts.

Pundita Circle Holds
Annual Picnic At
B. O. Curry Home

The annual Pundita Circle picnic was held last Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Curry on Parr avenue. Sixty members and their families enjoyed the dinner, which was served at a long table in the garden, which was beautifully lighted with lanterns and candles.

Mr. Curry gave an address of welcome, and Mrs. Curry provided a delicious dessert. A social hour, following the dinner, was enjoyed in the garden.

The committee in charge of the evening included Mrs. B. O. Curry, Mrs. A. C. Anderson, Mrs. George Burrow, Mrs. Lester Davidson and Mrs. R. Y. Maxon.

Kenneth Peake, Local Dairyman, Overcome
By Sun Last Wednesday

The hot wave last Wednesday proved to be almost too much for "Kenny" Peake, our local dairyman. While working in the hot sun during the afternoon he was quite overcome. Dr. Merrill was summoned and administered treatment. At last report Kenneth was steadily recovering, but not yet able to resume his duties with the accustomed pep.

SEEKS TO CHANGE

The Campbell Chamber of Commerce has endorsed the new state-wide prune plan and have given their support in the pool sign-up.

A special committee composed of Dr. W. I. Merrill, H. M. Shadle and Al Covey were appointed to investigate the garbage disposal system here and have already expressed their dissatisfaction of it. Clayton Dymon, who is visiting his cousin, Frank Coupland, has offered to establish a new system. If accepted, he will make his home here and will conduct the scavenger business as the Chamber directs.

The organization also voted to lower the membership fee from $2 to $1 annually.

Rainbow Girls Put On Their Work For Masons, Eastern Stars

Those who witnessed the exemplification of the degree work of the Order of Rainbow Girls at the Masonic lodge at IOOF hall last evening had the privilege of a rare treat. No one can witness such a performance without being inspired to better living.

The drill work was beautifully executed and wonderfully displayed the remarkable ability and talent possessed by this group of young ladies.

The work elicited the heartiest praise from all who saw it and Mother Advisor Mrs. Heple was the recipient of highest compliments for her direction. Already several have asked that the work be reproduced here at a later date. Arrangements were made through the invitation of Harry C. Smith, master of Charity lodge and the planning of Miss Antoinette Zillmer, a past grand officer of the order in California, assisted by her father, Dr. A. W. L. Zillmer.

CONSERVATION
BIG CREEK BED

The water conservation district has just completed purchase of 62 acres of land at the junction of Almaden and Guadalupe creeks from the Southern Pacific company. Negotiations leading up to the purchase began in April, 1930 when the district asked for either a sale or a long time lease. In the fall of 1930 the district was informed that the railroad would sell and a price was agreed upon. The price paid is $5,000, or $81 per acre.

The land is nearly all gravel bed lying within the banks of the two streams, part of it being west of Almaden road.

This gravel area is the largest of any creek bottom gravel within the district and has a large capacity for absorbing water and passing it on to gravel strata leading to the east, west and north.

The directors of the district are planning structures to be so placed on the gravel land that stream flow will be spread out to cover the entire area thus assuring a maximum absorption of water.

The benefits to be gained by the people of the district by this purchase are beyond measure. The people are assured that this large and strategically located percolating area will not be destroyed by commercial gravel interests and that it will for all time be catching water coming down from the mountains and passing the flow out through all radiating gravel channels.

MORELAND SCHOOL
GRADUATED EIGHT
PUPILS THURSDAY

Graduation exercises for the Moreland school were held last Thursday evening at the school. An operetta, entitled "O Cho San," was presented by children from all grades of the school, under the direction of Miss Blanchard and Miss Anderson. The pupils taking part were Elsie Dutra, Thelma Yamada, Howard Griffin, Esther Kawamoto, David Adams, Bud Teresi and Howard Imada.

The school orchestra, under the direction of Albert Taft, offered several enjoyable oriental numbers, and David M. Burnett delivered a very interesting talk to the graduates.

Diplomas were presented by the principal, M. C. Langdon, to a class of eight. They were: Frank DeRose, Eddie Freitas, Esther Kawamoto, Toru Ogino, Jack Orr, William Perez, Anthony Sunzeri, and Thelma Yamada.

Bertha Jackson were heard in recital Saturday afternoon in the cafeteria of the grammar school.

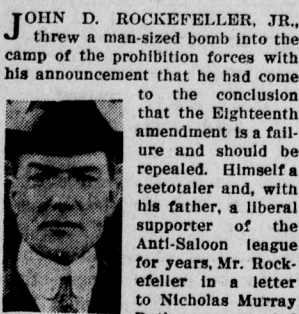

Mrs. Jackson specializes in younger pupils, and the relatives and friends who had assembled greatly enjoyed their renditions.

The rhythmic orchestra gave several well executed selections under the direction of Margaret Tanner. At the conclusion of the program light refreshments were served by Mrs. Jackson, assisted by the Misses Mary Shank, Charlotte Kerr, Juanita Knowles and Helen Lenox.

J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Comes Out for Prohibition Repeal—Republicans Fashion Moist Plank—Shouse Is Democratic Bone of Contention.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR., threw a man-sized bomb into the camp of the prohibition forces with his announcement that he had come to the conclusion that the Eighteenth amendment is a failure and should be repealed. Himself a teetotaler and, with his father, a liberal supporter of the Anti-Saloon league for years, Mr. Rockefeller in a letter to Nicholas Murray Butler commended the latter's anti-prohibition plank and urged its adoption by both the Republican and Democratic parties in their national conventions. He declared the aims of prohibition had not been achieved and said that "drinking generally had increased; that the speak-easy had replaced the saloon and that a vast army of lawbreakers has been recruited and financed on a colossal scale."

Upon these reasons of "unprecedented crime increase and the open disregard of the Eighteenth amendment which I have slowly and reluctantly come to believe," Mr. Rockefeller based his present stand. He declared that "the benefits of prohibition are more than outweighed by its evils."

After approving in detail Doctor Butler's proposal for repeal and state control of the liquor traffic, Mr. Rockefeller expressed a hope that the "millions of earnest workers in behalf of the Eighteenth amendment" would continue their efforts in support of "practical measures for the promotion of genuine temperance."

Of course the wets were jubilant over Mr. Rockefeller's statement, and the dries tried without much success in minimizing its effect by contradicting his assertions concerning the success of the prohibition legislation.

ENCOURAGED by the Rockefeller pronouncement, leaders of six national anti-prohibition organizations met in New York and formed a "united repeal council" with the purpose of placing in both the Republican and Democratic platforms planks calling definitely for the repeal of prohibition. Pierre S. du Pont was elected chairman of the council.

MANY anxious hours were spent by administration chiefs and James R. Garfield over the form in which the Republican prohibition plank should be cast, and a conference participated in by Postmaster General Walter Brown, the President's political adviser, and a dozen senators finally approved a resolution which states that, while the Republican party stands for the enforcement of all laws and abhors the saloon, it recognizes the right of the people to pass upon any portion of the Constitution and therefore favors the prompt re-submission of the Eighteenth amendment to the people of the several states acting through nonpartisan conventions.

This naturally did not at all suit the wet Republicans and they promised that the issue would be fought out in the convention. The tentative plank was derided as utterly evasive and deplorably weak. On the senate floor Senator Borah, dry, and Senator Tydings of Maryland, wet Democrat, took turns poking fun at the proposed resolution. Borah said it was "the rarest combination of hypocrisy and insincerity ever heard of," and Tydings called it "the biggest piece of sham, bunk and camouflage ever seen assembled in 150 words."

INDIANA Republicans in state convention went wet despite the agonized pleadings of the prohibitionists. A plank was adopted calling for submission to the people of a repeal proposition on both the national and state dry laws. It was not a strong declaration in favor of such repeal, but it sufficed. Raymond Springer was nominated for governor and Senator Jim Watson was renominated by acclamation.

WHEN President Hoover signed the new revenue bill, he said many of the taxes imposed by it were not as he desired, which mildly expressed the opinion of countless Americans concerning that hodge-podge measure. However, bad as it is in many respects, the act will under certain conditions and with in certain limitations, balance the federal budget at the end of the fiscal year 1933, provided congress enacts the necessary economy legislation. The senate almost rejected the conference report on the revenue bill because the tax on electricity was made to fall on the consumer instead of on the companies.

One economy bill cutting the costs of government was passed by the senate after it had been mangled. Designed at first to save $238,000,000, it was amended so the saving will be only $126,000,000. An important change was the substitution of the enforced furlough plan for federal employees for the 10 per cent pay cuts previously adopted. This was rejected by the house.

SPEAKER GARNER'S $2,300,000,000 relief bill was rushed through the house by an almost solid Democratic vote aided by 21 Republicans. The rest of the Republican members paid heed to President Hoover's denunciation of the measure as a gigantic pork barrel and voted in the negative. It is hard to understand how Garner and his associates can justify spending so much time and effort on this measure in the face of their expressed conviction that it would never get through the senate or past the Presidential veto. The senate, indeed, showed at once that it intended to smother the bill. Leaders of both parties in the upper house prepared to push through a noncontroversial bill permitting the Reconstruction Finance corporation to lend up to $300,000,000 to states for relief purposes. This was just one section of the senate Democratic relief program, the remainder, involving a $500,000,000 bond issue for public works and a $1,000,000,000 expansion of the reconstruction unit's capital, being left for later consideration.

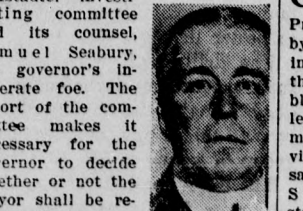

FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT'S supporters, having decided to run the Democratic national convention to suit themselves, announced that J. J. Shouse wouldn't do as permanent chairman, though he had been selected by the Smith-Raskob faction and presumably had been accepted by Roosevelt. They declared instead that they would try to put Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana in that position, which he held eight years ago. Mr. Shouse, however, made it known that he and his friends would fight to the last ditch, so there is a prospect of a first-day battle in the convention that will provide for a test of strength between the Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt forces.

Mr. Shouse said that Governor Roosevelt expressly consented to the plan to make him permanent chairman.

"Not even remotely was any kind of condition attached to the governor's assent; otherwise I should not have been a party to it," said he. "Any speech I may make before the convention will be my own and will not be censored or inspired by any candidate. The presiding officer of the convention should represent no faction and should decline to assist or obstruct the fortunes of any candidate."

MORE seriously affecting Roosevelt's chances was the problem of Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York, put up to him by the Hofstadter investigating committee and its counsel, Samuel Seabury, the governor's inveterate foe. The report of the committee makes it necessary for the governor to decide whether or not the mayor shall be removed from office, and it is believed he will take some action a day or so before the Democratic convention meets. Presumably, if he ousts the mayor he will rouse the wrath of Tammany Hall—which might cost him the vote of New York in the election but undoubtedly would add to his strength elsewhere, for Tammany is not admired outside of the metropolis.

Governor Roosevelt made a strategic move when he demanded that Seabury quit talking and submit to him the charges and evidence against Walker at once. He let it be known that he would give the mayor unlimited opportunity to defend himself and his administration, but said he would demand that Walker prove himself fit to be mayor of New York. Walker engaged Dudley Field Malone as his chief counsel.

J. J. Shouse

SEN. CHARLES GATES Dawes suddenly and unexpectedly sent to President Hoover his resignation as president of the Reconstruction Finance corporation to take effect June 15. He denied rumors that there had been any friction between him and Eugene Meyer, Jr., chairman of the board of the corporation, and averred he was quitting the post merely because he wished to resume his banking business in Chicago. In his letter to the President General Dawes said he felt he could do this now that the budget had been balanced and "the turning point toward eventually prosperity seems to have been reached."

IOWA Republicans at last have grown weary of Senator Smith W. Brookhart and have put an end, at least for the present, to his political career. In the primaries they decisively rejected him, selecting as his successor Henry Field of Shenandoah, a nurseryman and a novice in politics who owns a radio station. Field has been making a vigorous speaking campaign in which he attacked Brookhart especially for neglecting his senatorial duties to make chauntiqua lectures and for nepotism. He pledged himself not to take any of his family to Washington and fasten them on the federal pay rolls.

Brookhart, a radical who never has hesitated to vote against Republican measures, refused to comment on his defeat, which was attributed by some observers partly to the fact that many voters hitherto Republicans had deserted that party and cast their ballots as Democrats.

The Democratic senatorial nominee was Louis Murphy, who defeated former Senator Daniel Steek.

In North Carolina the Democrats turned against one of their long-time leaders, Senator Cameron Morrison, who was defeated for the nomination by Robert R. Reynolds, an advocate of prohibition repeal. Neither of them had a majority of votes cast, so both will be candidates again in the run-off primary on July 2. Two others who polled a considerable vote promised to throw their support to Reynolds.

Franklin Roosevelt won a sweeping victory in the Florida Democratic primary. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray getting only a small vote, Mark Wilcox of West Palm Beach, running on an anti-prohibition platform, apparently defeated Ruth Bryan Owen for the congressional nomination in the Fourth district.

WISCONSIN'S conservative Republicans in convention at Madison nominated a ticket with the purpose of putting a crimp in the regime of the La Follette dynasty. John B. Chapple of Ashland was put up for the United States senate in opposition to Senator Blaine; and former Gov. Walter J. Kohler was nominated for governor to run against Gov. Phil La Follette who seeks to succeed himself.

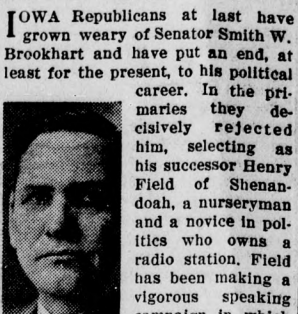

SAMUEL INSULL of Chicago, who for many years has been one of the country's leading public utilities magnates, has finally fallen under financial stress and has been forced to resign as head of his great utilities concerns and also as officer or director of many other corporations with which he has been associated. Besides his money troubles Mr. Insull is in poor health. He is soon to sail for Europe and it is understood he will reside in England, where he owns a home. Three of the big corporations he built up, it is said, will unite in paying him an annual pension of $18,000.

CHILE has become a "socialistic republic." The government of President Montero was overthrown by a military and socialistic junta in a coup d'etat that was almost bloodless, and the leader of the movement, Carlos Davila, former ambassador to the United States, was installed as provisional president. Colonel Marmaduke Grove was made minister of defense and immediately had to get busy suppressing a counter-revolution in the southern part of the country.

It was authoritatively stated in Santiago that the establishment of the socialist regime created no immediate danger for American investments in Chile except those tied up in the $375,000,000 Cosach nitrate combine which, it is understood, would be nationalized.

President Davila said one of the main purposes of the government would be to remove the burdens on workers and the unemployed. He promised every man would have a job within a few months.

A WAY OUT FOR PRUNE INDUSTRY

Stuck tight in the bog of competitive prices!

A $150,000,000 enterprise (bringing $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 returns into the state in normal years) virtually helpless in the mire of a market collapse brought on by destructive competition from within the industry itself!

Prunes selling in domestic markets at a minus one-quarter cent basis return to growers—50-60's, for instance, packing in 25-pound boxes selling at 2 1/2 cents per pound!

That shows how deep in the mire the prune business really is!

A situation like this calls for drastic action. Far too much is at stake, say leading prune growers, to permit complete ruin to engulf the prune industry of California.

A careful investigation into the causes that have brought this situation about has been made by the Giannini Foundation of Agricultural Research, recognized by everyone as highly competent authorities, and a comprehensive program for pulling the prune industry out of the mud hole of destructive prices has been worked out.

Industry cooperation is to provide the powerful tractive force that is expected to pull the prune industry back to the solid ground of fair prices.

Four months of painstaking effort in designing and constructing has gone into the making of the Industry Cooperation plan whereby association and independent growers will work together towards putting their industry back where all agree it rightfully belongs.

The working machinery of the plan has been designed by qualified authorities of long experience in the marketing of agricultural products, and experts in the theoretical and technical sides of the problem have been constantly on the job. Leaders in other co-operative enterprises have also contributed liberally of their knowledge gained by years of practical experience.

Thus, when industry cooperation is finally put to the test it should have little difficulty

THE FARMERS CORNER

By Ralph H. Taylor

California agriculture's two major demands of government—rigid economy and an equitable readjustment of the tax burden—promise to become the dominant issues of the 1933 state legislature, if present political barometer readings are correct.

Indicative of the trend of public sentiment is the fact that fully two-thirds of the 300 candidates who have thus far announced themselves for the Senate and Assembly are running on "economy and tax reduction" platforms.

Practically every other issue has been shoved into the background by the movement to reduce the overhead of government, even local issues, in most instances, falling into the discard. One of the most hopeful aspects of the legislative campaigns, looking to the success of a retrenchment program, is the general refusal of candidates to entice the voters with promises of special appropriations for "pet projects."

The pork barrel campaign, judging from a review of the candidates' announcements, is distinctly in disfavor this year both with the candidates and the public at large.

In addition to the radical change in the distribution of voting power at the next session which will be brought about by the operation of the farm bloc plan of legislative reapportionment, giving control of the Senate to the rural counties and vesting control of the lower house in the metropolitan areas, there is also promise that the next legislature will include more farmers, business men and editors, and fewer lawyers, than in times past.

While attorneys will still constitute the largest single group in the two lawmaking houses, farmers will step into second place, if the number of farmer-candidates has any significance, and business men will be in third position with editors and publishers fourth in the list.

Thirty-five candidates who list themselves as farmers or ranchers are already in the field, with the prospect that many others will enter before the final date for filing, June 25.

With this changing set-up in legislative personnel, the plea of farmers for a reduction in exorbitant farm taxes, and real estate taxes generally, should at least find a sympathetic audience.

In line with the crusade for a slash in government expenditures and a corresponding reduction in taxation, the farm group proposal that an extra half cent of the gas tax be apportioned to the counties, to permit the abolition of the rural road tax, is rapidly gaining in favor.

It is generally agreed by the groups interested in furthering practical economy that the state highway system would not suffer under a 50-50 split of gas tax revenues—the state and the counties each taking 11-2 cents, instead of the present allotment of 2 cents to the state and 1 cent to the counties.

And the resultant saving to farmers and other owners of real property would total nearly $7,000,000 annually. Especially commending this plan is the fact that it accomplishes both economy and tax equalization at one stroke, as the drop in rural taxes would be effected without any increase in state taxes.

Senator William E. Harper of San Diego county has announced that he will father the bill to allocate the extra half cent to the counties.

"My purpose," Senator Harper has announced, "is to make it unnecessary for supervisors to continue imposing the present road tax on property outside of unincorporated cities and towns, which is one of the most burdensome forms or rural taxation. This program will in no way interfere with the orderly development of the state's highway system."

Center Traction Means Safety

Most tires have gripless "sled-runners" of rubber in the middle. See how Goodyear puts traction there—big husky keened-edged blocks of rubber to dig in, grip and hold. Remember, brakes stop the wheels but it takes tires with traction to stop the car.

State Leaders Plan "Mardi Gras"

Proposed county entries in the Shrine "Mardi Gras" of Industry, July 27, were discussed by state leaders on their visit to the "Mardi Gras" headquarters last week.

Addition of colorful international entries from foreign colonies in San Francisco and the active participation of additional nation-wide industries are causing Director General William H. Woodfield, Jr., of the Shrine Convention to urge that the counties of California hasten their entries in the "Mardi Gras" of Industry which will be held on the second day of the convention and National Demonstration of Optimism in San Francisco, July 26, 27 and 28.

"The idea of putting twenty-five million dollars into circulation, as planned by the Shriners of North America in the convention and national demonstration of optimism, has a definite appeal to the civic and business leaders of the nation," Mr. Woodfield declared.

"They recognize the courage and optimism that are being displayed by the Shriners in putting on this great show during the present period of adjustment, and see in this event an opportunity to align themselves with the greatest single movement that is being made toward the return to prosperity."

"To that end they are contacting us daily to formulate plans for their participation in this pageant in a way which will be not only a good-will activity, but will be to their greatest advantage, for aside from the value that the "Mardi Gras" of Industry as national demonstration, it affords an unusual opportunity from an advertising standpoint.

"From three to five hundred thousand visitors are expected in San Francisco during the three days of the Convention, and they must carry away a picture of California that is worthy of her. The glories of our state must be brought to their attention, and there is no time for delay. The present indications are that entries will have to be limited in order that we may adhere to the lively, quick-moving event we have planned, and the California entries must be registered in the near future to secure a favorable location." The Shrine "Mardi Gras" of Industry, the most colorful and appealing parade which has ever been seen in San Francisco will be held on the afternoon of the second day of the convention, Wednesday, July 27. Color, animation, sound, and an air of gaiety will be combined in floats that will be a delight to hundreds of thousands of spectators.

Electric Cooking is Economical.... Saves my time!

Out picnicking—being a pal with her children while school vacations are on and sunny days entice little play-trips to Nowhere—she is confident dinner will be ready, perfectly cooked in her electric range when she gets home.

Such an incident is a common pleasure for the more than 210,000 California women who cook with electricity.

The evening meal placed in the oven of an electric range in the morning receives perfect chef-cooking when a clock turns on the current and thermostats regulate cooking temperatures.

Meats acquire charcoal-grill brownness without basting; tender and juicy with sealed-in flavor. Vegetables retain minerals important to health because so little water is needed. Pet recipes for favorite desserts become time-after-time successes. Truly nothing finer has ever been created for cooking than the modern automatic electric range.

You can afford to cook this modern way. One of these speedy new electric ranges costs no more than any other good range. And cooking costs average but one cent a meal per person.

See the beautiful new electric ranges. Come into our office or your electric dealer's store. Take advantage of the Special Offer, which includes easy terms.
